

Sorensen's Natural History Stroll

Look for signs of winter approaching and what it means for the flora and fauna of Hope Valley. How do native creatures survive harsh winter conditions to thrive once spring arrives? Join William Tweed, former chief naturalist at Sequoia and Kings Canyon National parks, as he shows how plants and critters prepare for the long, cold months ahead. Bring binoculars and wear warm layers, and water-resistant footwear for this fun and informative outdoor adventure. For reservations and to book a stay at Sorensen's, call 800.423-9949.

Cost: $50 for Sorensen's guests/$75 non-lodging guests, includes lunch.
