Charges against John Andoh, administrator of the South Shore's bus system, have been dropped.

Andoh was arrested in October on a warrant stemming from allegations he lied to South Lake Tahoe officers about a summer traffic accident.

"I just got the minute order in the mail. No apology from anyone. A very costly endeavor for a very minor charge in which the accident was not my fault per the police report that I finally got last month," Andoh, who runs the bus agency known as BlueGo, told Lake Tahoe News.
