

Court: Release Garrido parole records

By George Warren, News10

SACRAMENTO – An appeals court Monday rejected an attempt by state corrections officials to avoid turning over additional documents relating to the bungled parole of Phillip Garrido.

The California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation (CDCR) sought to overturn a Sacramento judge's order that the department hand over all of Garrido's parole records as requested by several media organizations under the Public Records Act.

The CDCR argued publishing the documents could endanger the safety and security of its staff.
