

Lake Tahoe to receive measurable snow

Crocuses are blooming in the basin. Robins are confused. Spring is the season according to the calendar. And snow is about to pile up. It must be Lake Tahoe in March.

A winter weather advisory is in effect until 11am March 28. Wednesday's commute is expected to be difficult – slick roads, blowing snow and nasty roads.

The fountain at Heavenly Village should be covered in snow soon.

Photo/LTN

Click the state icons on the home page of Lake Tahoe News to know what the road conditions are like.

The National Weather Service is calling for 8-16 inches of snow above 7,000 feet and 4-8 inches at lake level.

The wind will continue to howl through much of Wednesday, which could bring waves as high as 4 feet.

Thursday and Friday are expected to be mostly sunny, with rain arriving Friday night and turning to snow on Saturday.

– Lake Tahoe News staff report

