

Chiropractor giving adjustments in exchange for canned goods

Josh Welch, a Meyers chiropractor, is working for food. Safe Haven Chiropractic is conducting a food drive from now through Nov. 17 to help the community for the holiday season.

Welch is exchanging chiropractic care for five non-perishable food items for local charity. Current, new or reactivating patients and families will receive a chiropractic adjustment for their donation.

This support is near and dear to Welch because during his time in college, living off school loans and supporting a wife and three kids, this type of community support helped them tremendously during the holiday season.

Welch may be reached at (530) 577.5433.
