

Nevada gaming win up – but not at Stateline

Northern Nevada was not much help in June when it came to gaming revenue.

While statewide revenues were up 14 percent compared to the previous year, they were down in Stateline and Reno.

The state Gaming Control Board today released June's numbers that show the state brought in $907 million. Stateline casinos were down 2 percent, with $12 million in revenues and Reno revenues were down 3 percent to $48 million, compared to 2013.
