

Stateline casinos do better than state

The Super Bowl often makes that month's gaming numbers in Nevada in the positive. Not so this February.

Losses on the Strip helped bring down the entire state, according to the Nevada Gaming Control Board. Casinos won $916.1 million in February, a drop of 1.08 percent compared to 2014.

Stateline properties, though, fared better. They were up 5.66 percent year-over-year to more than $15.57 million.
