

$5K could be made available to all Nev. students

By Trevon Milliard, Reno Gazette-Journal

Jennifer Evans has three children and they have all attended private school since her oldest started kindergarten nine years ago.

She changed that last week, putting her children in Gardnerville public schools.

The single mother and full-time nurse couldn't afford to pass up the state's offer, which is being extended to every Nevada parent: Pull your child from public school after at least 100 school days of enrollment and the state will pay you $5,000 a year per student.

Read the whole story