

Tahoe resident picking up trash for fun

By Ryan Canaday, KTVN-TV

Trash around Lake Tahoe is a year-round concern for residents of the area and one local is taking matters into her own hands.

With a trash picker and small plastic bag in hand, Jaime White keeps her eyes peeled for any piece of litter that may come her way.

On Monday, at Logan Shoals Vista Point, she demonstrated just how easy it is to spot debris off the beaten path. In plain sight, she finds bottles, cans, papers and plastics. At least once a day, this third generation Tahoe resident will walk up and down trails and beaches searching for trash and she does it all in her spare time, even considering it to be fun.
